April 2020

This is quite an unusual newsletter in that there is very little school news to inform you of due to the ongoing national school closure as a result of Coronavirus. Despite much speculation in the press, the official government stance still is that 'schools will remain closed until further notice'. However, the Education Secretary did state on 29th April that when schools do reopen, it would likely to be in a 'phased manner'. The dates and details of this possible return have not been given at the time of writing but it is understood that the planning and consultation process is underway.

In the meantime, I sincerely hope that you and your families all remain safe and well. Please continue to keep in touch with school by regularly checking Parentmail, Class Dojo and the school website for updates. All three classes now have Class Dojo pages up and running. Please let school know if you have any issues connecting to your child's current class page. It has been lovely to see some of the wonderful home learning that has been taking place during this period of school closure. Although a difficult time, it is clear to see that many of you are really making the best of the situation and wholeheartedly supporting your children with a wide range of learning tasks.
